Chapter-by-Chapter

Chapter One—Chapter Two—Chapter Three

When the story began, Sara was using one of Wanda’s scarves and the family dog Boysie to entertain herself. Which of the two following personality traits do you think Sara revealed by this behavior? Cite things Sara said and did, including the way she reacted to Wanda’s criticism, as well as the definition of the words you chose to support your answer.

insensitive imaginative foolish humorous obnoxious affectionate irritating spontaneous immature cheerful

Sara complained about her big feet and the fact that a boy at school named Bull Durham could wear her sneakers. Wanda assured her that people didn’t notice such things.

• Based on your experience, which girl do you think was correct? Are young people concerned with each other’s physical flaws, or are physical differences on the unimportant-things list? Is the reality somewhere in between? Use examples to explain your answer.

• How do you explain Sara’s choice of orange tennis shoes which, as Wanda pointed out, drew attention to her feet? One moment Sarah liked them and then later she hated them. What do you think this happened?

Sara believed that she was having the worst summer of her life. She compared her life to a kaleidoscope that had been turned causing everything to change so that it no longer made the same designs.

• Think of the way your life was the year before and compare it to your life today. What things have remained the same? What things are different?

• Would you return to your former life if you could? Why or why not?

• What changes do you look forward to?

Something to Think About . . .
Find facts in the story to prove that Sara idolized Wanda. In what way(s) was Sara like Wanda? How were the two girls different?

Charlie had a special challenge of not being able to remember or to reason. He could not help himself or his rescuers when he was lost. For most young people, however, it’s helpful to have a plan in place for just such emergencies.

Design a brochure for people younger than you with the following information:
- Rules of behavior that would diminish the likelihood of getting lost to almost 0%.
- Remember to include various places—malls, hiking or camping trips, sports events, vacations, etc.
- Advice and rules to follow for keeping safe and increasing chances for rescue if he or she is lost.

Charlie’s habit of thumping his foot against the wall was unusually loud the night after he and Sara had gone to see the swans.
- Explain how this fact was a foreshadowing of things to come.
- Was there any reason for Sara to be concerned about Charlie’s loud thumping on that particular night? Explain your answer.

While he was lost, Charlie’s watch, a source of comfort, stopped running. This loss, coupled with other events that he could not understand, frustrated Charlie to the point of wailing and piercing screams.
- What one possession would you find the most difficult to be without? Why is this possession so important to you?
- Think of several adults you know. What comfort objects do they possess? Do they serve the same function as your important possession?
- Why do you think people of all ages and abilities like to own special objects? What is it that they do for us?

Which three of the following words would you think best describe Mary as a friend? Use facts from the story and the words’ definitions to support your choices.

- sympathetic
- caring
- cheerful
- honest
- tactful
- comfortable
- empathetic
- inspiring
- trustworthy
- giving
- patient
- supportive
- courteous
- generous
- amiable
- caring
About Your Teaching Pack

The primary goal in creating the teaching packs for children’s novels is to provide a classroom-ready, non-threatening method for checking student comprehension and stretching thinking skills. When used as a basic guide for teaching a novel, the materials offer many and varied opportunities for learning.

Use your teaching pack as a guide and lead your students into discovering new ideas about . . . . .

THE PLOT

Each test page is actually an outline of the plot. In your teaching pack, the chain of related events that tell the story has been pulled from the novel and reformatted into a series of questions. Whether they are aware of their ability or not, all good readers sense the rhythm of the connected events that compose the plot; and consequently comprehend the story. This “plot rhythm” is the basic structure of the tests.

To further your students’ understanding of plot, try the following activities:

Summarizing the Story: Using only the chapter questions as a guide, have your students write a summary of the chapter. For a set of ten questions, limit the number of sentences they may write to seven. For twenty questions, allow no more than twelve sentences.

Reporting the News: Have students write a newspaper article, based on the events from a set of questions, and add the who, what, when, where, why format. Some needed information may be located in previous chapters.

Twisting the Plot: Choose one or two questions from each chapter and change its answer—true to false, no to yes, or a different answer—and explain how changing a single (or several) events would change the story. To further illustrate the rhythm of a good story, try changing the answers to one complete set of questions. Your students will see how difficult, if not impossible, it is to tell a sensible story from a tangled set of events.

THE CHARACTERS

Questions that illustrate character motivation and personality are purposely included. Too often, when they are asked to tell what kind of person a story character is, the only answer many of our students can muster is “nice.”

In your efforts to remove “nice” from your students’ literary vocabulary, try this idea:

Character Charts: Display individual charts for the main characters. As the chapters are read, record facts, behaviors, or events that relate to the each character. Then connect the items with several appropriate words such as empathetic, brave, calloused, bold, untrustworthy, etc. The teacher can take the lead by contributing the first few words and then assigning the task of identifying more terms to students. Record the word collections on the charts with the story facts.

This information is a valuable student resource when displayed in the room for all to see and use during a writing assignment. In creating and using character charts, students will soon begin writing more fluently and insightfully about story personalities.

Use the charts to encourage your students to try some “predicting” or “detective” writing about what the character(s) might do next or what might have happened after the story ended. Let the charts help your students recognize CHARACTER CHANGE (dynamics).

Another fun activity with the charts is to match a book personality with a zodiac sign. Students must justify their reason for thinking a character is a particular sign by citing his/her behaviors, words, reactions to situations, etc. that prove the match.

READING BETWEEN THE LINES
(Implied Meaning)

Because the primary goal for the objective questions is basic comprehension, items requiring a student to interpret an event or a character’s behavior are not included. Always included, however, are questions that establish the existence of a story component carrying an implied meaning.

MAKING PREDICTIONS
(Recognizing Story Clues)

Authors subtly place clues in the story line giving the reader hints as to what is about to happen. Like the implied meaning, these clues are brought to the reader’s attention in the form of a question. Once a student learns to spot the gems, his/her ability to comprehend and enjoy a story tends to leap forward.

Use “thinking-out-loud” class discussions to list all the possible meanings of the clue questions. Have your student write their individual predictions (no sharing or telling), store the papers until the novel is finished, and then retrieve them for reading. Sometimes, a wrong prediction makes a story as good as the original.

OTHER FUTIONS

The objective test pages are excellent discussion guides for both whole groups and small groups. They work well as homework reading guides and as conferencing tools. They are also useful management tools for teachers who wish to use multiple titles in one classroom.

Something to Think About. . .
Something to Write About. . .

In this section, students pack up what they already know about the novel and go exploring into its every nook and cranny. Some activities require the simplest interpretation or application, while others will challenge the most proficient thinkers.

Rationale:

Guidelines. . .

The in this section are based on the skills presented in the Taxonomy of Educational Objectives (Bloom's Taxonomy). There are two reasons for this choice. First, it mirrors the Novel Teaching Pack’s primary purpose of building a variety of sophisticated thinking skills upon a foundation of basic knowledge. Second, in following the taxonomy guidelines, activities that correlate with many state educational standards emerge automatically.

Levels of Difficulty. . .

A variety difficulty levels to accommodate the needs of individual students, including the gifted, is an integral part of this component. However, all items from this section are intended to challenge and sharpen thinking abilities.

Final Note

The Novel Teaching Packs are designed for use as supplementary material that supports a total reading program. It is my goal to provide busy teachers with a classroom-ready, practical resource loaded with motivational and learning opportunities for their students. It is my hope that your purchase will prove to be a hard-working instructional component for years to come. Thanks for choosing one of my products for your classroom.
